The Editor,

"Western Home Monthly",

Winnipeg, Man.

Dear Sir:

In response to your request for a few words of greeting to the readers of the Christmas issue of the "Western Home Monthly" I have pleasure in expressing the hope that in Canada throughout the coming year we may have a more real prosperity than any we have yet enjoyed. The crisis through which we are going is so terrible that it must have driven us all to consider more deeply than ever the fundamental basis of prosperity. We are all made to realise that sacrifice is essential for a strong national life, and while others far away are undergoing this sacrifice on our behalf it is our duty at home to do what we can to make the country worthy of that sacrifice. We should endeavour to understand the privileges of our Anglo-Saxon liberty, the true understanding of which involves on our part the performance of the duties connected with our social and public life.

Yours sincerely,

President.
